FALL 1988

Dean's Report— Some Final Observations

by Robert G. Lawson

As I prepare this report I sit alone in a new office and enjoy my new status as "Professor of Law". It was only two weeks ago that I finished my term as Dean, with six years of service not counting an earlier term of two years as Acting Dean.

As only my closest friends know, I accepted the position of Dean in 1982 with tremendous reluctance, mostly out of fear I would find myself trapped in a job I could not stand and from which I could not escape without seriously harming the College. I am not able at this moment to deny that I am pleased to have come to the end of my term. But I can say without hesitation that my fears about the job were totally unfounded. It is an honor and privilege to serve as Dean of this College and I am delighted to have had the chance to do it. It was a growing experience for me. I can only hope that it proves worthwhile for the school.

I have thought for a long time, and still do, that institutions of higher learning rarely if ever make gigantic leaps forward. Progress toward real rather than imagined excellence comes slowly and usually as a result of patience, good judgment, and lots of hard work. I believe that the College of Law at this University has been on the right path for as long as I have been associated with it, thanks to the tireless efforts of former deans and the commitment of a dedicated faculty. I have tried hard to keep it on that path for the last six years, hoping for a little progress along the way and the foresight to relinquish the baton of leadership in timely fashion, too soon rather than too late.

As I look forward to the beginning of school and a return to full-time teaching and research, I see nothing but a very bright future for the College. Both inside and outside the University there is a growing feeling that the College of Law is in a position to reach for a level of excellence truly unique to higher education in Kentucky. There is a fuller appreciation of the quality of our school by the Board of Trustees, the central administration of the University, and most importantly our new President. There is a solid sense of pride among the faculty and students for the College and a realization among most that the great aspirations we have for the school are truly within our grasp.

We find ourselves in this position for a lot of different reasons, but in my mind one thing stands out above all the rest. I have had the pleasure of experiencing firsthand an unprecedented growth in alumni commitment, involvement, and interest in the College. We decided a few years ago to seek your help and you have responded beyond our wildest hopes. As we reap the benefits of record levels of alumni support, we must acknowledge that much of our success is attributable to your generosity and to the tireless efforts of alumni leaders who are simply unwilling to let us fail as an institution.

It is not feasible to describe all the ways in which the school has been helped by the alumni over the past decade. The success of our efforts to create endowed professorships deserves some special mention. Five years ago we were trying to find a way to create our first professorship and we find ourselves at the beginning of this year with six professorships funded at a level of $100,000 each. This is a considerable accomplishment by any standard of measurement. We have to be pleased with our efforts on this front but not at the expense of failing to see that

Thoughts of a very new dean

Dean Rutheford B Campbell

The law school is a place that is rich in personal history for its graduates. My own memories of my three years as a student are vivid and generally, if not entirely, warm and pleasant. How could they be otherwise?

For me there are many components of these memories. I can never forget Adams' Restaurant, Martin's (where beer was 35 cents, J.D. Crowe played every Wednesday, Friday and Saturday night, and there was no cover charge, although they did pass the hat for the band at least twice each night), Mrs. Powers' boarding house (where Mrs. Powers, who for twenty years served a diet overly rich in carbohydrates, personally supervised the inflation of one of my classmates from a mere boy of 155 pounds to a 190-pound man), Phillips Grocery (where bologna sandwiches were 20 cents), the stark fear of that first set of law school exams, those great political, philosophical, sports, etc. arguments in the halls and lounges of the law school and the general outrageous and irreverent conduct that always seemed to increase as finals approached and inhibitions were eroded.

Although these particular recollections are personal to me and the other members of the class of 1969, similar memories are shared by each class that graduates from the law school.

Still, it was the faculty and our classmates that had the most lasting impression and impact on all of us. We will always remember the extracurricular antics and classroom rigor of Professor Gilliam, who, sadly, passed away last year (Fred Whiteside said, upon the death of Professor Gilliam: "All that partying and drinking finally killed Dick." Professor Gilliam was 90 at his death), the classroom combativeness of Roy Moreland, the depth and gentleness of Burt Ham, the intellect, strength and decency of Paul Oberst, the unpretentious brilliance of Bob Lawson, the style and classroom technique of Garrett Flickinger, the quiet competence and fairness of W.L. Matthews, etc., etc., etc.

Finally, and certainly not least, are our classmates. There are those we loved, those we liked and those, perhaps, we didn't like so well. Still, they are (not were) our classmates. We studied together, lived together and partied together, and, of course, we argued with each other. For better or worse, we never forget all that.

These experiences affect our lives forever. Today, what we do for a living, the friends we have, our station in life and our view of the world are all influenced by the three years we spent at the law school.

It is, I believe, comforting to us all to know that the core of the law school experience is unchanged. We still take a bunch of bright young men and women who, as the mythical Professor Kingsfield would say, have minds filled with mush and train them to think like lawyers. The introduction of computers and new, technical courses into the law school's curriculum does not change all that. We attempt to instill them with a pride in their profession and sense of the importance of quality work. We coax, beg and threaten them in an attempt to inspire notions of excellence.

Today the law school is well equipped to continue this tradition. The quality of our student body is improved. We have the best faculty I have seen in my 15 years here. You, our alumni, have been generous with your support of the law school. We have a new, energetic and competent President at the University, who, I believe, is prepared to support the law school.

There are, of course, problems. We had a rocky spring, with the legislature's treatment of higher education and the threat of faculty defections (unfortunately, we lost our colleagues Ken Germain and Bill James — Ken to practice and Bill to another institution). Nonetheless, I think we emerged from this bleak period strong and consolidated.

I am optimistic about the future of the law school. Our future success, however, depends to a large extent on you, our alumni.

We need, most obviously, your generous financial support. We cannot continue to make the type of strides we have made in the last ten or so years without it.

We also need your cheerleading support. When you see Dr. Roselle, our new University President, or any members of the University's Board of Trustees, tell them what you think about the importance of the law school to the University and the state. We need them to know that we have a strong, positive, spirited, successful group of alumni who are willing to help the law school. We need to convince them that our law school is indeed a crown jewel of the entire University system and deserves their special attention, care and support. Tell the same thing to your state legislators, and, for that matter, tell it to anyone who will listen.

We have, I am convinced, for too long assumed that it is somehow unseemly to parade our own wares, to promote our own interests. We no longer have that luxury. It is time to speak up for the law school in a positive, unobnoxious but loud voice. I am proud of our law school, and I am going to tell that to anyone who will listen. Please join me in this.

Also, join me in congratulating Bob Lawson for six successful years as dean. Quietly, as is his style, Bob established relationships, mechanisms of support and methods of operation that may survive as long as the music of Mozart (well, at least as long as the music of Glenn Miller or the Four Tops). Although he did many things well, certainly it is his fund raising and his ability to work with the bar to the mutual advantage of both the law school and the bar that will be his lasting legacy. I can assure you that the law school would be a markedly less successful institution without his contributions in these areas.

Finally, wish me luck, remember me in your prayers, but most of all, send money.

Students honored at Awards Night

In April, the College of Law held its third annual Awards Night ceremony in the College of Law courtroom. Both current and incoming law students were honored, along with members of the College's faculty and staff. A number of the alumni who played a role in establishing new scholarship funds and awards assisted with the presentations.

Law student awards

Greenebaum Doll & McDonald Awards

The Greenebaum firm, which played an important role in the institution of Awards Night three years ago, presents in-state tuition scholarships to the students who place at the top of the first and second-year classes. Phil Scott '67, a partner in the firm's Lexington office, announced the recipients of this year's Greenebaum Doll & McDonald Awards for Academic Excellence. Shawn Johnson received the award for the first-year class, and John T. Moore is the recipient for the second-year class. Shawn Johnson participated in last year's ceremony as the winner of the South Central Bell incoming student scholarship, and John Moore is a Matthews scholar.

Kentucky Law Journal Awards

Stoll, Keenon & Park has established several scholarship funds for the College of Law, two of which reward work by second-year students on the staff of the Kentucky Law Journal. Robert Houlihan Sr. '41 assisted Professor Sarah Welling with the presentation of these scholarships. The firm's scholarship for best writing was presented to James Thornton for his comment on cigarette manufacturers' liability for lung cancer. Gene Humphreys, the 1988-89 Editor-In-Chief for the KLJ, received the SKP scholarship for the most outstanding overall contribution to the Journal by a second-year student.

third-year student, received the Colvin P. Rouse Award for outstanding writing for his comment entitled "PACs in Kentucky: Regulating the Permanent Committees." The Lowell T. Hughes Award for outstanding writing for the Journal by a faculty member was given to Professor John Rogers for his article, "Apportionment in Kentucky after Comparative Negligence."

Mineral Law Awards

The Massey Coal Company has made possible a scholarship fund for students who work on the staff of the Journal of Mineral Law and Policy. Professor David Short, Director of the Mineral Law Center, presented this year's Massey Foundation scholarships to second-year students Robert Fox, Sally Wasielewski, Kurt Warmbier, David Wilson and John Kolanz.

Dr. Lyle V. A. Sendlein of the Institute for Mining and Minerals Research presented the Institute's research fellowship to Stephen Allen, who is Managing Editor of the JMLP for the 1988-89 academic year. "This is the only fellowship in the country given to a law student by a mining research institution," noted Dr. Sendlein in presenting the award.

Moot Court Awards

Several Lexington law firms prominent in the litigation area have established scholarships for students who excel in the College of Law's moot court program. Professor Bill Fortune, who served as moot court advisor this year, introduced the members of the donor firms who assisted with the scholarship presentations.

William R. Garmer '75 presented the Savage, Garmer, and Elliott Scholarship to Jane Grigsby. The Landrum, Shouse & Patterson Moot Court Scholarship was awarded by Leslie Patterson Vose '78 to Margaret Alfred. Kerry D. The fourth member of the National Team, Elaine Roberts, was awarded the

Roger B. Leland Scholarship. An additional Leland Award was given to Phil Ellenberg for outstanding work in the College of Law's "in-house" moot court competition.

ATLA Team Awards

This year for the first time students at the College of Law participated in the American Trial Lawyers Association mock trial competition. R. Burl McCoy '72, who advised the team, presented trophies for their participation to Brent Brennenstuhl and Helen Young, the team members, and to Dan Murner and Peggy Tolson, who served as their witnesses for the mock trial. All of these recipients are '88 graduates of the College. Brian West '88 received a special award from the team for his assistance.

National Women Lawyers Association Award

Professor Louise Graham announced the winner of this year's National Women Lawyers Association Award, given to the woman in the graduating class who has excelled academically and who shows promise to represent women well in the profession. The recipient is Mary Ann Born.

Incoming student scholarships

The dramatic increase in incoming student scholarships over the past few years has helped the College of Law attract top Kentucky undergraduates who otherwise might have left the state to attend law school. Many of this year's scholarship recipients attended Awards Night and had the opportunity to meet their scholarship donors.

Stites & Harbison Scholarship

This year was the first for presentation of the Stites & Harbison Scholarship, endowed by the firm to award achievement in scholastics, leadership and communication skills. Charles Palmer '58 of the firm's Lexington office presented the Stites & Harbison scholarship to Dylan Seitz of Louisville, a graduate of Bellarmine College who was president of its debate society and pre-law club and recipient of the Bellarmine Service Award.

Thomas P. Bell Scholarships

In 1986 a scholarship fund was created to honor the memory of outstanding graduate Thomas P. Bell '50.

Contributions poured in, and the fund is now the College's largest. Four Tommy Bell scholarships were awarded in 1987, and four more will be awarded this year. Two of this year's Tommy Bell Scholars attended Awards Night to receive their scholarships from his son, T. Bruce Bell '83. They are Gladys Green of Versailles and Leah Hawkins of Ashcamp in Pike County.

James Park Sr. Scholarship

James Park Sr. '20 was one of the College's most accomplished graduates. The Park family established this scholarship in 1986 in his memory, and his son, James Park Jr. '58, presented this year's scholarship award. The recipient is Timothy Wells of Hyden, who was graduated from UK this spring with a degree in political science and an outstanding record.

Brown, Todd & Heyburn Scholarships

When Dean Robert asked for help with scholarship monies, the firm of Brown, Todd & Heyburn responded by setting up a fund sufficient to award several merit scholarships for each incoming class. Three Brown, Todd & Heyburn scholarships will be awarded for the 1988-89 academic year, and two of the recipients attended the Awards Night ceremony.

Charles Cassis '63 of the firm's Louisville office, who was instrumental in setting up the fund, presented Brown, Todd & Heyburn scholarships to Mitchell Hall and Jennifer Wells. Mitchell Hall is from Somerset and a graduate of Davidson College in North Carolina, and Jennifer Wells is from Inez and a graduate of UK.

South Central Bell Scholarship

The South Central Bell Telephone

Charles S. Cassis '63 presents one of the Brown, Todd & Heyburn scholarships to incoming law student Jennifer Wells of Inez, Kentucky.

Phil Scott '67 presents second-year student John T. Moore with the Greenebaum Doll & McDonald Award For Academic Excellence for being first in his class.

Company, a strong supporter of education in Kentucky, has established a scholarship to the College of Law that is earmarked for a Kentucky native. In addition, special consideration is to be given to graduates of UK's College of Business and Economics. Creighton Mershon, the company's general counsel in Kentucky, presented this year's scholarship to Martha Nash of Hopkinsville, a 1982 graduate of the College of Business and Economics who works in Lexington.

Stoll, Keenon & Park Scholarship

One of the four Stoll, Keenon & Park scholarships is awarded to an incoming student on the basis of scholastic merit. Bob Houlihan, Sr. presented the scholarship award to Teresa Patrick, a magna cum laude graduate of Eastern Kentucky University who achieved a perfect 4.0 average over her final three years of undergraduate education.

Sallie Bingham Scholarship

Distinguished alumna Rebecca Westerfield '76 created the Sallie Bingham Scholarship Fund in 1987 to serve a unique purpose. The scholarship is to be awarded to someone who was engaged in a career prior to entering law school, and who has particular financial need because of family responsibilities. Special consideration is to be given to applicants from gender or racial groups underrepresented in the legal profession.

Associate Dean Drusilla Vansant introduced the 1988 Sallie Bingham Scholar, Patricia Martin. She already holds two degrees from UK, a Bachelor's in English and Education and a Master's in Educational Psychology and Counseling, and until recently served as one of the few female wardens of an all-male institution in the country.

Colvin P. Rouse Scholarship

This year Colvin P. Rouse '28 established a merit scholarship for an incoming law student who is a graduate of Centre College. Rouse also funds an award for outstanding student writing for the Kentucky Law Journal. Dean Robert Lawson announced the recipient of the first Colvin P. Rouse Scholarship, Christopher D. At Awards Night, Dean Lawson presented Lewis Awards to Ebba Jo Sexton of the law library staff, Susan Saunier of the continuing legal education staff and Barbara Drake and Martha Grange of the dean's office, "the two real deans of the College," according to Dean Lawson.

Recognition for the class of '88

Before closing, Associate Dean Vansant recognized third-year student Robert Dotson '88, Chairman of the Dean's Task Force of UK's Student Development Council, for his work with the College's first student telethon. He announced that the Class of '88 is the first graduating class to make a "Senior Challenge" to upcoming classes to support the College of Law. Members of the Class of '88 pledged over $7,500 to the College, to be given over a three-year period.

Moot Court team reaches Sweet Sixteen

For the second year in a row the College of Law National Team reached the "Sweet Sixteen" in the National Moot Court competition sponsored by the City Bar of New York. The team of Robin Cornette '88 and Andrew Self '88, arguing without notes of any kind, defeated Brigham Young and Suffolk University before dropping a split decision to Montana. Gag orders and federal preemption were the issues in this year's competition, as the litigants debated the Federal Cigarette Labeling Act's effect on common law claims for failure to warn of the dangers of smoking.

The national team is chosen by rigorous competition in the second year of law school, culminating in a final argument before the Kentucky Supreme Court. A group that starts with around sixty students is narrowed to twenty-four, then to eight, and finally to the top four advocates in the second-year class. Those four pair off into two teams—for the Petitioner and the Respondent—in a hypothetical case prepared by the City Bar of New York, to be briefed and argued as if on appeal before the Supreme Court of the United States.

The two teams (Frank Miller '88 and Dana Patterson '88 were UK's other team in 1987-88) return to law school early in the fall and spend September and October writing their briefs. They are on their own; the rules prohibit outside help of any kind. Once the briefs are mailed, the faculty can help prepare the teams for the oral arguments in the regional competition held in November in Richmond, Virginia.

Sponsored by the Young Lawyers Section of the Virginia Bar, the regional competition draws from a six-state region in an intense two-day competition. The winners and runners-up advance to the national competition in New York City in January. In 1986-87 UK won the region behind the strong team of Gretchen Lewis '87 and Terry Yewell '87 (who lost in the semi-final round in New York); and this year the Robin Cornette—Andrew Self team beat Virginia, Campbell College, Duke and Wake Forest before falling to the home team of the Richmond Spiders in the finals.

Much of the credit for the success of the program goes to Professor John Rogers, the faculty supervisor, and to a series of able Moot Court officers who have generated interest in the second-year program and produced highly competent teams through rigorous competition. Credit for the 1987-88 team's success goes also to Professor Bill Fortune, who took over the advisory role for Professor Rogers during his year-long Fulbright Fellowship to the People's Republic of China. The College is very thankful also for the generous support of Roger Leland '54 and to the firms of Stoll, Keenon & Park, Savage, Garmer & Elliott and Landrum, Shouse & Patterson for providing tuition scholarships for their third year of law school to the national team members.

Four excellent advocates have been chosen for the 1988-89 Moot Court National Team—Margaret Alfred, Jane Grigsby, Elaine Roberts and Kerry Smith. The Moot Court Board is in the equally able hands of Jim Johnson. The Moot Court program for the College of Law looks forward to another successful year.

Stipanowich awarded for arbitration article

Professor Thomas J. Stipanowich

Associate Professor Thomas J. Stipanowich received the Center for Public Resources' 1987 Award for Excellence and Innovation in Alternate Dispute Resolution and Dispute Management. The $4,000 award was presented for Stipanowich's article "Arbitration and the Multiparty Dispute: The Search for Workable Solutions," which was published in the Iowa Law Review in March of 1987. Stipanowich received the prize at the Center for Public Resources' New York headquarters in January. The Center is supported by major corporations and law firms that recognize the crisis in the courtroom, and presents a number of awards each year for outstanding achievement in use of innovative methods for resolving disputes effectively.

"Commercial arbitration is currently a popular alternative to judicial resolution of commercial disputes," said Stipanowich. "But one major drawback of the process is in the difficulty of resolving disputes involving multiple parties." His article examines the legal and practical issues raised by arbitration of complex disputes

250 attend Alumni Banquet

The College of Law Alumni Association held its annual banquet in conjunction with the Kentucky Bar Association annual meeting June 9. Over 250 alumni and their guests were present to hear University of Kentucky President David Roselle praise Dean Robert Lawson, the College of Law faculty and its alumni for the College's successes of the past five years. He also spoke about the many challenges he has faced in his first year as president.

Former dean Tom Lewis gave a surprise speech in honor of Dean Lawson, who stepped down July 1 after serving as dean for six years. Professor Lewis said that he had been asked to "roast" the outgoing dean, but was unable to find any faults worthy of complaint other than Lawson's golf game.

Following Lewis' speech and a standing ovation for Dean Lawson, Alumni Association President Jack Reisz presented the dean with the Association's gift of a trip to Austin, Texas for him, his wife, Rosemary and teenage daughter, Carina to visit the one of his three daughters who does not live in Lexington. Dean Lawson thanked the group, saying that this was the "perfect gift" for him, because "one of the few things I regret about the deanship was not being able to spend enough time with my family."

Also at the banquet, seven new members were elected to the Law Alumni Board and four current members were re-elected.

The new members are:

Gregory M. Bartlett '73 Fort Mitchell
David W. Denton '69 Paducah
Edsel T. Jones '68 Winchester
Mark R. Overstreet '80 Frankfort
William L. Stevens '72 Danville
Penny Travelsted '80 Bowling Green
Rebecca Westerfield '76 Louisville

The members reelected to the Alumni Board are:

Charles J. Lavelle '75 Louisville
Marcia Milby Ridings '76 London
William R. Dexter '82 Owensboro
John Van Meter '78 Ashland

Following the banquet, the Board elected the following officers for 1988-89:

Barbara B. Edelman '77, President
Charles J. Lavelle '75, Vice President
John Van Meter '78, Treasurer
Drusilla Vansant, Secretary

involving multiple parties and proposes practical solutions to current problems.

Arbitration generally substitutes a group of experts in a particular field for a judge and jury, according to Stipanowich. For example, in a construction case, an architect, a contractor and an attorney may make up a panel to resolve the dispute.

"The theory is, persons with pertinent knowledge or experience are in a much better position to resolve the dispute than a judge and jury," he said. "They don't need to be educated and can therefore resolve the case more quickly and fairly."

Stipanowich said that some attorneys feel threatened by arbitration "because they think it will decrease business or reduce their fees." He notes, however, that although parties involved in arbitration do not have to be represented by an attorney, lawyers often play an important role in case preparation and presentation.

However, arbitration may avoid procedural delays associated with litigation, such as extensive motion practice and discovery, Stipanowich said. Also, decisions in arbitration cases are much more likely to be final than judgements by a court, he stated. Pertinent statutes generally provide only very narrow grounds for appeal of arbitration awards.

"Arbitration is not a panacea," according to Stipanowich. "But it is currently the focus of creative efforts to avoid the serious problems we face in the courts."

Stipanowich became interested in the various aspects of arbitration while practicing law for an Atlanta firm that handles construction and commercial cases on a national scale. Since joining the College of Law faculty he has written several articles on commercial arbitration.

Stites & Harbison scholarship program

Stites & Harbison has established a scholarship program for the College of Law designed to help the school attract outstanding students. The firm has agreed to contribute $20,000 over a four-year period to endow the Stites & Harbison Scholarships.

The scholarship will be awarded annually to incoming students on the basis of demonstrated excellence in scholarship, communication skills and leadership qualities, the earmarks of successful attorneys.

"This is the kind of help the College of Law needs to compete for top students," said Dean Robert Lawson in announcing the gift. "We are very grateful to Stites & Harbison for contributing to the school in this special way."

Rouse scholarship for Centre graduates

Colvin P. Rouse '28 of Versailles has endowed a $20,000 scholarship fund for the College of Law designed to lure top Centre College graduates to the College. Recipients of the scholarships will receive in-state tuition for the first year of law school, and may receive continued support in the second and third years. The Colvin P. Rouse Scholars are to be selected on the basis of academic achievement.

"The Rouse Scholarships will be a great help to us in recruiting graduates of Centre, which has been the source for some of our best students," said Associate Dean Drusilla Vansant. "We are most grateful to Mr. Rouse for his generosity and his continuing interest in the College of Law."

In 1985 Rouse established a fund for the College of Law to encourage and support excellent scholarship in the Kentucky Law Journal. The Rouse Award is given each spring to a third-year student for outstanding writing published in the KLJ.

Oexmann Criminal Law Award created

A $10,000 endowment from Lexington attorney J. Richard Oexmann is being used to establish an awards competition for College of Law students in criminal law. The fund was created by Oexmann to recognize those students who show great promise in the criminal law area.

Recipients of the Richard J. Oexmann Criminal Law Award will be determined by a faculty committee, which will prescribe a particular criminal law matter as the basis for each year's student competition. Winners of the student competition will be selected by the faculty committee on the basis of either an oral presentation or a writing competition, or possibly both. The committee may grant the Oexmann Awards as stipends for winning students to work with the offices of a Commonwealth's attorney, county attorney or legal aid organization.

Student competition for the first Oexmann Criminal Law Award will take place in the spring, '89.

Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia to deliver Swinford Lecture

Justice Antonin Scalia of the Supreme Court of the United States will deliver the sixth biennial Judge Mac Swinford Lecture Wednesday, September 14, 1988 at 7:00 p.m., in the Concert Hall of the Otis Singletary Center for the Arts on the University of Kentucky Central Campus.

Justice Scalia was appointed to the Supreme Court for the term beginning in 1986. He was graduated in 1960 from Harvard University Law School where he served as a member of the Harvard Law Review. Justice Scalia has lectured and written extensively in the area of regulatory and administrative law. He is former Chair of the American Bar Association Section of Administrative Law, and former Chair of the Administrative Conference of the U.S. The exact title of the September lecture is yet to be determined, though the Swinford Lectureship "professional responsibility" theme will be continued.

The Swinford Lecture Series has been sponsored jointly by the College of Law and the Kentucky Bar Association since 1978. This fall's lecture will mark the tenth anniversary for the series. The five previous lectureships have been presented by Archibald Cox (1978), Judge Robert Keeton (1980), Justice William Rehnquist (1982), Justice Sandra Day O'Connor (1984), and former Attorney General Griffin Bell (1986).

The lecture series is named in honor of the late Judge Mac Swinford who served as U.S. District Court Judge for the Eastern and Western Districts of Kentucky beginning in September of 1937. Judge Swinford was born in Cynthiana, Kentucky in 1899, was admitted to the Kentucky Bar in 1922, served as U.S. District Attorney for the Eastern District 1933-37, and practiced at Cynthiana, Harrison County, Kentucky until his death in 1975.

Justice Scalia's visit will include scheduled interaction with both faculty and students as well as the Wednesday evening lecture. His participation marks the third time in ten years that the Swinford Lectureship has been assumed by a United States Supreme Court Justice.

Dean's Report

there is much yet to be done. A few months ago, while in Austin, Texas, I visited the University of Texas Law School. On a wall outside the library of this very fine institution, one of the country's best, I counted fifty-five bronze plaques with the name of funded professorships in that college and twelve larger plaques recognizing the funding of endowed chairs. We started our work in this area a little later than we should have. But we are on our way with a marvelous beginning.

Some mention should be made of our work in the area of scholarships and financial aid for students. A qualified student body is as critical to the quality of a school as a competent faculty. A combination of increasing costs of law study and intense competition for outstanding students has created a need for resources far in excess of what we have had to use. We have exerted some special effort to deal with this problem over the past two years and have had some success. It is my belief that greater resources for scholarships would do more for the quality of the school in the short run than any other single factor.

I am very hopeful that we may get an opportunity to address this problem in a big way before long. Our progress in the area of funded professorships started with an extremely generous challenge gift by Wendell Cherry. We have hoped for a similar opportunity in the area of scholarships and may be on the verge of success. We may have to work harder and dig deeper than ever before to meet the challenge. But meet it we will, for there are enormous and lasting benefits for our school at the end of the road.

This and other things of importance leave me with nothing but high hopes for our school. Many of you know Biff Campbell, our new dean, as well as I do. He is one of the reasons I feel so good about our future. He is a native of Hyden, Kentucky, a graduate of Centre College and a product of our own College. He is also an inspiring teacher and a very competent lawyer. He has an understanding of the history of our institution and an appreciation for what it has been and what it can be. He can move our school to greater heights than it has ever seen, but not without your help. As I extend to you my heartfelt thanks for support, loyalty, and friendship beyond anything I ever deserved, I do so with hope and expectation that your great enthusiasm for the College will thrive and grow under the leadership of our excellent new Dean.
